

Dangerous skiing

In a famous ski centre at the mountain, it is a crowded tourist season. The ski centre has great slopes, paths and terrain for skiing, and hotels are nearby. All perfect and idyllic. Few friends, tourists and university students were there to enjoy the winter season and skiing at this attractive tourist center. As soon as they came, they went skiing. However, one of them, Michael, saw one steep cliff that no one wanted to visit. It was a cliff biggest and steepest of all, almost breathtaking. He didn't care, he just wanted to climb there. However, it was extremely dangerous. The security didn't allow people to go there during heavy snowfalls for their own safety. All the roads that led to the cliff were snowed and the cliff itself was inaccessible. But Michael was persistent. He told the others that he didn't care and that he was not afraid at all. He said he would go anyway. His friends were against it, but Michael was determined to go. He started walking towards the cliff but the security spotted him and stopped him. While others were watching, Michael pushed the security man in a great agitation. The man fell.

Then all of Michael's friends approached to restrain him and prevent chaos and police... When they took him at the hotel they criticized him for doing so, and told him that he almost ruined their vacation with that aggressive behavior and obsession for adrenaline and snow cliffs... He told them that he wouldn't do it anymore and apologized. The night came and they had a party at the hotel, in a disco club. But since his friends were occupied with the party, Michael thought: "I do not care about this. I did not come here for some pathetic party, I came to climb high cliffs and experience the rush of the adrenaline. That cliff will be mine tonight! If the only possible way out is to climb there during the night, I will do it." During the night he started his nocturnal adventure and began climbing the cliff. Nobody was there. He had a lamp and slowly he made his way. Suddenly a hundred meters beneath the top of the cliff he saw four people, three men and one girl dressed in red jackets. They introduced themselves: "I am Travis and here are Dustin, George and Laura. Can you introduce yourself and tell us what you are doing here?"

He replied: "I'm Michael, and I am going to climb to the top of the hill." Travis told him: "No man, please do not do that, it is very dangerous, some people died in accident years ago here." Michael angrily replied: "Hey, nobody is forcing you! Don't waste your time and thank you for telling me that but I am going anyway!" It has been like that. He climbed there and felt a chilling gust of wind. He loved it! He went on skiing. During the night, people were partying in the hotel when a heavy avalanche shook the grounds of the hotel. The next day they noticed that Michael was missing. Everyone was searching for him but nobody could find him. His friends told the authorities that he must have been on that cliff to ski at night. After a few hours of search, they found him buried deep in the snow near the cliff. The avalanche had hit him and killed him. The authorities then revealed that the cliff was forbidden to climb on due to a logical reason: in the same place 20 years ago, 4 people died in the same way: Travis, Dustin, George and Laura. Their bodies were found buried in snow and all of them were in the red jackets.

