

Who is knocking

It was an ordinary autumn night with a moderately cold wind and cloudy weather. A family in the town gathered for the weekend: a mother, father and their two kids: a high school boy and a school girl. They had an ordinary weeknight together. Suddenly someone knocked at the door. The father opened the door, and there he saw an old, decrepit woman in black clothes. The woman stuttered to him that their girl is in danger and that she's going to get sick. The father was outraged by her words and ordered her to leave. Then he called the police. When the police came, they searched everything but couldn't find that woman. It must have been some old, sick and demented woman, as they said.

A few days later, problems occurred. The girl started having panic attacks and visual hallucinations. She believed she was seeing spiders crawling on the walls, but nothing was there in reality. She was all in aches and pains with each passing day, and after one month of terror, she wasn't able to walk again. She had to be placed in a wheelchair. Her parents took her to many hospitals, but the doctors couldn't reveal what was wrong with her.

Then, the desperate parents were advised to visit a medium. Maybe he could discover what was wrong with the girl since ordinary medicine wasn't helpful.

Desperate people went to the medium and took the girl in a wheelchair with them. In an instant moment as he saw her he told them that she had been cursed. That woman who knocked at the door that night then was actually a witch! The medium believed that the witch had put some sinister object in their garden to summon the evil. He advised them to search for that object and once they find it to burn it. They headed to their house and actually found a suspicious object in their garden. It was a piece of black cloth used for funerals and it was bound with a part of a dead animal and some plants. They threw that in the fire, and somehow it exploded like fireworks. The very next day after the girl had woken up, she could walk again and felt much better. Suddenly she became as healthy as before!
